Thinking Out Loud

H. M. L.

Despite a drizzling rain, the ardor of football fans was not damped Saturday when the big bowl at Stanford filled with old grads, young grads, and undergrads and their friends to wave the blue and gold, or cardinal, as their sympathies inclined. When the game was over and the Golden Bear had made a fine feast of assorted red Indians and was licking his chops, one old U. C. Alumnus growled, "If Stub Allen had only played his first team throughout the game, the score would have been better." Across the aisle came this riposte: "And if Tiny Thornhill had only played his second team."

The game officials carried towels at their belts and were constantly wiping the mud and ooze from the ball. It was skiddy weather for pigskin and players. No telling what the score mmight have been had the field been dry and the air clear.

The announcer in the last quarter solemnly warned all in the stadium to drive safely on the way home. As a matter of fact not a single accident in which any one was injured could be traced to the 80,000 who attended the football game Saturday. It is a new record. Perhaps a word, like a stitch in time, can save not stitches but lives.

The Southern Pacific trains and the big Greyhound busses did a tremendous business. Thousands left their cars at home and rode safely and care free to the game and home again. Those who came in cars often came from afar. There were car licenses in evidence from every state this side of the Mississippi. Nothing like the big game to call out all the old timers whose memory often runs back to days of the "flying wedge" that old fashioned bone-breaker play that in its heyday made hundreds of cripples.

Football is in a state of evolution. Forward and lateral passes make it much more chancy than it was a generation ago. The team that passes takes a long chance both on losing the ball and in gaining at one coup a splendid yardage. Stanford probably rues the forward pass that lost the team its place in scoring territory.

It really looked as if both Bear and Indian coaches were determined to see to it that every man on their respective squads got his two or three minutes play in the big game, so that hereafter he can sport the block letter of his college on his sweater. Substitutions streamed on the field at almost every play during the last half.

California wins, for the first time in several years, the right to play in the Pasadena Rose Bowl. They will play Alabama ,Fordham, or Pennsylvania and since it will take place in the land of little rain, it ought to be a tremendous game and spectacle.

Stub Anderson has fairly established his right to succeed the great Andy Smith. After all, football like many other activities depends much on the resourcefulness and shrewdness of the captain and quarterback. To ferret out the weaknesses of the opposing eleven and then drive through the soft spot, is more than half the battle. To train the players to use their heads is much more important than to train their arms and lege. Stanford's line has been weak throughout the season and the first Bear touchdown resulted from a series of yard gaining plunges through that line.

We read in Gibbons and Macauley of the tremendous spectacle staged in the Colloseum of Rome, but in point of numbers the audience was never as large as it is at the big Stanford and California stadiums on the occasion of the big game. For, as a matter of fact, the seating capacity was not there, nor the means of transport available. California's major spectacle, the big game, has possibly been exceeded in number of spectators at the recent show staged by Hitler at Berlin in honor of Mussolini's visit, but for a purely sports event the big games in California undoubtedly beat the world record in attendance.

Don C. Billick, superintendent of the Rawhide mine near Colfax spent last week end at his home in Nevada City. Storms are delaying surface work at the mine. The property is in a deep canyon and building sites are cut out of the canyon walls. A site has been prepared for a home for Mr. and Mrs. Billick.

TRIBUTE TO LATE JASON R. MEEK

CAMPTONVILLE, Nov. 22.—Evan W. Kelley, formerly connected with the forest service at Challenge and other sections of this part of the country, now located at Missoula, Montana, recently read in the Western Constructions News of the death of Jason R. Meek. not having known of the death of his brother, the late William B. Meek, which took place almost two years ago, Kelley writes the following tribute to him:

"During his days as superintendent of the Brandy City mine, and the subsequent years of my life in California, I learned to know him well, to value his counsel, and to hold his friendship in highest regard. He led a led a life rich in kindly service to others—a well beloved man—a fine reward for one's time on earth.

"I send this note as a tribute to his memory. I realize that it will mitigate in no degree the grief of his family, but it may be monentarily somewhat cheering to know that someone far away remembers and wishes to record a long standing admiration of him."

Hang On To Sales Tax Urges Arthur B. Foote

Editor, Nevada City Nugget
Dear Sir:

In conjunction with you article on Taxes appearing in the issue of November 15, it should be pointed out that the Riley-Stewart Tax Law has cut the Nevada county tax rate almost in two, at the same time producing more revenue. This Tax Law substituted the sales tax and income tax for the former method of levying most of the state's revenue from the public service corporations and railroads. This former law was most unfair, because it removed from county assessment rolls all the operating properties of these corporations, which in some counties amounted to as much as 94 per cent and in some to as little as 2 per cent of the assessable property remaining. In Nevada county it was 46 per cent, and the tax rate had to be increased 46 per cent to produce the same revenue as before the removal. Under any system, the people must pay all the taxes, but it is unjust to make the people in one county pay more than in another. In 1932 the writer was a member of the State Tax Research Council and figured out at that time that Los Angeles county was paying $3,645,000 a year less and Nevada county $48,500 more than its share of state taxes. Had each county paid its share, the Los Angeles rate would have been 12 cents higher and the Nevada county rate $1.40 lower.

The benefit of the Stewart-Riley Tax Law to Nevada county is shown by the following fiures. In 1932-33 a rate (including specials) of $5.00 a hundred produced $266,527, while in 1937-38 a rate of $2.70 will produce $314,154.

The moral of this—hang on to the Sales Tax. That is a direct tax and you know everybody pays it. An indirect tax is apt to fall on those least able to pay.

ARTHUR B. FOOTE.

STATE GAS TAX WILL TOP FIFTY MILLION, 1937

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 22.—For the first time in the history of the state, California's gasoline tax probably will exceed $50,000,000, it was indicated today in a report made by the State Board of Equalization.

The motor vehicle fuel tax amounted to $4,308,581.28 for the month of October to bring the total for the ten-month period up to $42,968,661.33. The tax netted the state slightly more than $48,000,000 in 1936, according to board records.

The October tax was assessed on the distribution of 143,619,376 gallons of gasoline. It represented a gain of 2.81 per cent over the same month for 1936, and was slightly under the assessment reported for September.

Oil companies reporting sales of more than 300,000 gallons during October were listed by the board with the explanation that resale of gasoline previously taxed and exempt sales to the federal government or in interstate or foreign commerce accounted for differences between total sales and taxable sales.

GOLD LEDGE FOUND IN DIGGING CITY DITCH

Last week city officials of Grass Valley digging a ditch in the northern part of the city to place a sewer in the Matt Patrick or Patrick's court uncovered several ledges of good looking quartz.

SNIPERS DRIFT AWAY FROM YUBA BRANCHES

Recent storms have driven many snipers off the north, middle and south Yuba rivers and streams in this area to lower districts or into the Sacramento Valley for the winter. Reports are the gravel banks and in the stream beds has been so thoroughly sluiced and panned for gold there were not nearly so many snipers the past season as there were two years ago. It is related there were 14 snipers near Purden's Bridge on the South Yuba two years ago and none there this year. Two or three camps of Indians on the middle and the south Yuba rivers, who have worked rich sections of gravel for several years, have moved out this fall and given up their locations.

Migrants' Mecca

Harvesting of California's giant crops of cotton and grapes has swung into its home stretch. Soon the last of the fat white cotton bolls, fairly bursting in its sheath, will have been plucked, and soon, too, will the last luscious grape of this year's banner crop — over a half million more tons than in 1936!

And what of the flivver gypsies and the fruit tramps of California's legions of migrant workers, 250,000 strong? This year, as a matter of fact, that man-sized army of some quarter odd million has been swelled by another 25,000 due to the extraordinarily huge cotton crop.

With winter's rain and chilly weather on the way, California's transient problem emerges in all its starkness. And the problem has been made increasingly pressing by the thousands of homeless migrants, many of them Dust-Bowl refugees who have been swarming into California from other states.

Few Californians there are who have not seen a brood of these bedraggled refugees living in some makeshift shelter rigged out of packing boxes, strips of canvas, or a primitive hut of branches and leaves.

As long as California remains the mecca of the nation's dispossessed, certainly the Federal Government must take an increasingly active hand in lending aid and providing better housing for these luckless Americans.

And not until all government authorities cooperate in seeking a solution will these unkempt colonies of migrant workers and their desolate shacks be vanquished in California —as they must and shall.—Contributed.

A penny bank will pay the difference between ordinary lighting in your home and scientifically correct better light for better sight.

For better lighting today is both sensibly reasonable as well as scientifically right. Modern lamps are without fussy, frilly shades that subdue light. Modern lamps instead have light-colored shades that are open at the top and set on higher stands to give light a chance to diffuse throughout a room.

More than a half million Better Sight lamps were sold last year. Persons who use them say there is nothing like them. These lamps do give more light, without glare, and for just a few pennies more a day than ordinary light that so often causes squinting and eyestrain.

World Peace Menaced by International Law Breakers, Says Jang

This is the second installment of the remarkable address made by Monroe Jang, Chinese business man of Marysville, before the Nevada City Rotary club last Thursday Jang has only recently returned from a visit to China and his comments on the Sino-Japenese war have aroused wide interest.

"International factor told Japan that this was the time to strike. She was eager to present Great Britain, who was again taking an active interest in the Far East shown by her rearming and her fortifications of Hongkong to Singapore, with a fait accompli. Soviet battleships with huge 16 inch guns, to match the pride of the Japanese which are being built is one of the factors which is hastening Japanese aggression. All these factors combined were the things that plagued the Japanese militarists. Facing disaster or the trenches the Japanese rulers chose the latter.

"There is an underlying and abstract cause behind these surface motives. Japan, for the past few decades, has been subject of social isolation and intellectual segegation. Japan has been unable to avoid the danger of mistaken action which confronts any group in the degree that it satisfying isolates itself from the corrective influence of other minds. To keep sane and well balanced, any one individual or group, must maintain the freest inter-communication of ideas with the rest of the world. To a peculiar degree, the Japanese militarists have been able to avoid this, with what evil results we see.

"The Japanese army in their recent and present aggression have so shocked civilized opinion that the case demands study. How can they profess to be keenly anxious for the attainment of harmony while they are deliberately murdering women and children in undefended towns? How can they hope to improve trade relations by destroying universities and libraries?

"Upon what grounds are they willing to dismember a friendly nation at the very time when the enlightened conscience of the world,, Ethiopia notwithstanding, is respecting in a new sense and degree the self-determination of peoples? And how can they hope to impose their conquering will upon a nation with so old and established a culture as China? All this is because the Japanese national mind lacks a proper balance, the pitfall of intellectual segregation.

"Her social isolation resulted in the inheritancce of feudal traditions of olden days which looks down upon peasants and workers, and as a consequence, the warrior is exalted and the present day militarists have their own way These army chiefs know only force and coercion as a means of effecting policy and purposes. Excepting bombings and destruction they consider nothing else as having weight in influencing the Chinese. These are but two of the basic causes which have led to the catastrophe in China today.

"In the light of these observations a much more radical and positive attitude on the part of nations and individuals is called for. To begin with, public condemnation, instead of being fitful and sporadic, should be systematic and organized, and should be given a definite educational content. Its aim should be not merely the attacking of an aggressor who is morally already downed, but propaganda in the best sense of that word, in behalf of principles which humanity holds dear. In the same way, the boycott if it should be applied, should be regarded not as an instrument of reprisals, but as a pacific means which an indignant public uses to protect against cruelties and injustices which the unworthy rulers of a people perpetrate.

"But this positive attitude should go further. It should aim at a fundamental change of diplomatic policies of the nations. At the opening of the nine power conference at Brussels, Dr. Wellington Koo warned the world:

"If the rampant forces of Japanese aggression in the far east are not effectively checked and faith in the pledged word is not restored, there is every danger these forces will overrun the boundaries of China and throw the world into a general war from which no important power will be able to keep aloof for long. As long as that aggression persist we are determined to continue our resistance. It is not peace at any price that will either render justice to China or do credit to civilization.

"It is a sad fact to admit, but it is true that in this conflict of the two major forces in this world, highly divergent qualities mark the two sides. On the one side is immense energy, courage, boldness, a readiness to take risks and undergo infinite sufferings, an amazing capacity for sacrifice. It is the side of what but yesterday we should have regarded as unmitigated evil — of gross aggression and conquest, the destruction of freedom, of the right of self-government and democracy, the very enthronment of ruthless cruelty and oppression.

"On the other side one sees drift, inertia, indecision, shortsightedness division of council, disunity, the refusal to make material sacrifice. These are the qualities which we find on the side of what yesterday the whole world regarded as unquestionable good on the side of order of law, of peace, of democracy, of nationality, the right of a people to live its own life, to chose with in limits its own form of government, the principle of equality in human relations—all of which are indispensable to the security of civilization.

"But nobody it would seem, is willing to fight for these principles, to suffer for them, none but the Chinese—and yet millions in Germany, Italy and Japan are prepared to die in order to repudiate them, to bring them to naught.

"Not only have these peaceful nations been unable to restrain these aggressive nations, but by their very passiveness, disunity and indifference, they have actually encouraged them in their flagrantly imperialistic designs. When the aggrehsion in Manchuria went unchallenged, the conquest of Ethiopia followed. When the Spanish insurgents find it possible to carry on war with open international aid, highway robbery in the Far East became the order of the day.

"No one a decade ago could have believed that lawless violence could be committed not only with complete impunity but with such amazing success in terms of increasing power and prestige for those guilty of defying every law of treaty faith, of international obligation, of the self-determination of people, of mercy, or of pity.

"Since violence is so successful and since it is being justified by a whole philosophy of ruthlessness, why should we expect to see it diminish? Indeed, the militaristic nations are now pretty firmly convinced that they never will be resisted by Britain, America and the rest of the world. The growth of that conviction mean that our power is deprived of the one function of deterrence, prevention of insuring defense without war.

"This combination of huge increasing armaments and retreat before threats is not pacificism. A blind isolationist policy is not pacifism. Still less is the refusal to pledge our arms to an international cause, to the principle of collective security, pacafism. Our ever growing armaments are irrefutable testimony that we reject the pacifist philosophy. As the matter stands, we have shown enough pacifism to destroy collective secuity, not enough pacifism to end competitive armaments.

"By their very contempt at the timidity of the peaceful nations, the Japanese militarists have flung a challenge in our faces. It is a challenge that we cannot take lightly, for lawlessness is bound to spread if it is not checked. At the Brussels conference, which is floudering because no nation is willing to show the lead, America has the opportunity to show the world what united effort on the part of peaceful nations can accomplish. For the sake of those principles which righteous nations held dear, for the sake of China, for the sake of the whole world, I sincerely hope that she will fulfill with courage the duty that has devolved upon her. It is only thus that the destruction of mankind's mellowest, must mature, and most beautiful civilization be brought to an end.

"Several weeks ago as the SS President Coolidge passed under the Golden Gate bridge as it steamed into San Francisco bay, I stood upon its deck and marveled at the gigantic steel structure, where when I left a year before there had been only two steel towers. A few minutes later, as we approached the bay bridge, I saw that too, was completed knitting the bay cities into one! All over California, the space of one year has brought about remarkable material progress. In Nevada City here, I find a new courthouse, new homes and buildings. Coming from a place where I saw nothing but destruction, I became aware for the first time of great material progress of the American people.
